

NEWS TV PREMIER

Thu, Jan 21 2016

0 My Playlist

Sign
In

ASIA PACIFIC SINGAPORE WORLD BUSINESS SPORT ENTERTAINMENT TECHNOLOGY HEALTH LIFESTYLE VIDEOS WEATHER MORE

RELATED CONTENTS

Singapore must do more to safeguard racial, religious harmony: Shanmugam
16 hours ago

Southeast Asia has become a 'fertile ground' for terrorism: K Shanmugam
16 hours ago

MORE SINGAPORE NEWS

Teaching tech in schools: Where does this fit in?
59 minutes ago

SingPost appoints special auditor to address concerns over purchase of stakes in 3 firms
9 hours ago

Singapore, New Zealand take part in artillery live-firing exercise
9 hours ago

RECOMMENDED FOR YOU

Chinese soldiers linked to US military hacking case: Report

European border checks would cost German trade billions - media

Twitter says sporadic outages in many parts of globe resolved

Twitter says service problems resolved

Obama, Erdogan speak by phone, vow cooperation against terrorism - sources

SINGAPORE

Muslim community must work with Govt to keep Singapore safe: Religious leaders, academics

Monitoring foreign religious speakers and keeping stronger tabs on social media are some of the measures mooted to counter the growing threat of religious extremism in Singapore as highlighted by Home Affairs Minister K Shanmugam.

By Justin Ong

Posted 19 Jan 2016 21:53 Updated 19 Jan 2016 23:21

VIDEOS

PHOTOS

238 Email More

SINGAPORE: The local Muslim community needs to work within itself, and hand-in-hand with the Government, to safeguard Singapore against the growing threat of religious extremism in the region, said religious leaders and academics on Tuesday (Jan 19).

This was in response to a speech by Minister for Home Affairs and Law K Shanmugam at the SRP Distinguished Lecture and Symposium organised by the S. Rajaratnam School of International Studies (RSIS).

Mr Shanmugam had said that the Government would implement measures over the year to maintain Singapore's racial and religious harmony, and to keep the country safe in the face of increasing religious extremism in Southeast Asia.

"It is an evolving threat, so the response from the Muslim community and the Government will need to be an evolving one as well," said Dr Mohamed Nawab, coordinator of the Malaysia programme at RSIS. "From the Government's side, we see that they put a lot of effort into intelligence-gathering and preventive measures; but within the Muslim community, I think we are playing catch-up to newer threats - like how powerful social media has become for groups like ISIS."

"In terms of our response, we don't have one as effective," he noted. "That's perhaps one area the Muslim community will have to think

Latest Singapore

Latest News refreshed just now

- 10:28 Man arrested for allegedly posting bomb threat online
- 09:49 Turf Club horses hit by Strangles disease
- 09:18 Constructive dialogue needed for mutual understanding: Archbishop William Goh
- 09:08 Ex-River Valley High principal sentenced to 4 weeks' jail

- 08:24 Bangladeshis in Singapore denounce extremists, fear backlash
- 07:44 Foreigner buying of Singapore homes hits 7-year low as Chinese sales plunge
- 00:07 Nobel laureates, students attend forum on scientific communication
- 00:06 Overseas business activity expected to drive revenue growth this year: Survey
- 20 Jan Football: Pennant delivers for Tampines Rovers in official debut
- 20 Jan NAC working with SLA to bring art to the heartlands

VIEW ALL SINGAPORE STORIES

Trending Stories

- Chinese soldiers linked to US military hacking case: Report
- 'X-Files' reunites Mulder and Scully in search for a truth closer to home
- More than 1,200 flee as Indonesia volcano spews ash, gas
- SingPost appoints special auditor to address concerns over purchase of stakes in 3 firms
- Singapore, New Zealand take part in artillery live-firing exercise

about and respond accordingly.”

Dr Nawab's RSIS colleague, associate research fellow Saleena Begum Saleem, agreed. “There should be intra-religious dialogue within the Muslim community to prevent external influences that can cause the community to isolate themselves,” she said.

“From the Government's perspective, there's already vigilance. They take note of foreign speakers that come in and that's a good thing,” she added. “And Islamophobia amongst non-Muslim communities is hardly talked about in an Asian context, but I think it is present and this is something we as researchers should be working on.”

The issue of foreign speakers in Singapore was also a major concern for priest Chung Kwang Tong, secretary-general of the Taoist Federation Youth Group.

“No matter what faith, when foreign speakers come in, the Government must make sure they preach a ‘correct’ form of religion and not their own distorted views,” said Mr Chung, who is also known as Master Wei Yi. “We don't have to stop all of them from coming, but at least we should go through local religious bodies to make sure it's a respected person versed in the doctrine. There should be some form of control and monitoring.”

“Most importantly, religious and community leaders and the Government must come together to ensure peace and security in Singapore,” he stated. “Especially when it's things we see on the ground, from our followers - any feedback we get, if we find anything suspicious, we have to work hand-in-hand with the Government.”

Meanwhile, Mr Malminderjit Singh, secretary of the Sikh Advisory Board, said: “I expect to see a slew of measures from the Government - making the national narrative more apparent so that every Singaporean understands and internalises it. That could be a powerful deterrent.”

He added: “I also expect the authorities to take a more targeted approach in keeping former extremists arrested in check. This includes a more developed rehab programme and also stronger penalties for repeat suspects.”

COMMUNITY “SADDENED” OVER RADICALS

Muslim community leaders Channel NewsAsia spoke to said they were “saddened” to hear of some Muslims in Singapore being radicalised or distancing themselves from the rest of society - points raised by Mr Shanmugam in his speech.

Long-serving community leader Ameer Ali Abdeali, president of the Muslim Kidney Association, had some advice for young Muslims. “They should look at how our Muslim leaders behave. Our mufti, former mufti, and highly respected Imam of Ba'alwies Mosque Habib

Bringing festive goods or food products back to Singapore? Check import guidelines first

Singapore well-positioned to serve as centre for digital businesses: S Iswaran

Banks tap into technology as they prepare for the future

Jermaine Pennant seals deal with S.League's Tampines Rovers

Taiwan president's apparent front door knock makes front page news

HARNESS THE POWER OF MEDIACORP
AND SAVE UP TO 70% FOR AN AUSPICIOUS

3.4M LISTENERS
3.8M VIEWS
3.8M IMPRESSIONS

Call MediaCorp Advertising Enquiries
6333 9888
Click here to email us now ▶

Hassan are also believers in inter-religious interaction. They do not distance themselves, in fact they are always accepting invitations from religious groups to participate in their activities, and during our religious festivities like Hari Raya, we invite our non-Muslim friends to participate and they are happy to come," he said.

"Young Muslims, don't fear or be shy of interacting with non-Muslim friends. There is so much to learn about their rich beliefs, traditions and customs. You will find there is so much common ground, while staying true to your religion," said Mr Ameer Ali. "You don't have to leave yours."

President of the Nanyang Technological University Muslim Society (NTUMS), Mohd Hamzah Mohd Abdul Kadir said he believes parents have a role to play in "showing the way" to their children when young.

"Our youth have to be exposed to mosques in Singapore where there are proper and correct teachings of Islam," he said, adding that the NTUMS regularly invites "credible" speakers recognised by the Islamic Religious Council of Singapore to give lectures to ensure their members "receive proper knowledge".

"A QUESTION OF WHEN AND NOT IF"

In his speech, Mr Shanmugam had listed various threats that Singapore faces as extremist ideology spreads in the region, saying Southeast Asia has become "fertile ground" for terrorism. However Dr Nawab said his mention of further risks, beyond that from direct attacks stood out for him. "Non-violent extremism, which is divisive for a multi-racial and multi-religious society like Singapore, and also Islamophobia - something which is rarely discussed, but a reality that is probably going to affect Singapore at some point. We have seen it happening in various instances around the world, especially Europe, and we are likely to see similar occurrences in Singapore as well," he said.

Mr Malminderjit said the most pressing threat to him was the spectre of a terrorist attack on Singapore. "As Minister reiterated, it's a question of when and not if," he explained. "To me, Islamophobia is something that is more of a longer-term threat. Fortunately we still have the advantage of several decades of goodwill among Singaporeans to still rely on, but of course that can erode easily."

"One cannot doubt the seriousness of the situation," said Mr Foo Chek Woo, president of Inter Religious Organisation Singapore. "Everyone in Singapore can and must contribute to foster multi-religious harmony."

- CNA/jo

238     Email  More

MORE STORIES FOR YOU

Taiwan's DPP official says transparent China relations a priority

Chinese soldiers linked to US military hacking case: Report

SingPost appoints special auditor to address concerns over purchase of stakes in 3 firms

Bringing festive goods or food products back to Singapore? Check import guidelines first

HOME

SINGAPORE

Singapore well-positioned to serve as centre for digital ...

Banks tap into technology as they prepare for the future

YOU MAY ALSO LIKE

Innovative Airplane Seats Provide Comfort and Help Airlines Save (SPRING Singapore)

Man opens bank account with 5m yuan in old, mouldy stacks... (South China Morning Post)

Graziano Pelle to leave Southampton after Charlie Austin arrival... (ESPN)

New Year, new goals, new way to lose weight. (HPB on Asian Parents)

Discover How This Investor Managed To Profit During The Recent... (WealthMastery.sg)

Chinese movie stars including Zhao Wei haemorrhaging money due... (South China Morning Post)

Recommended by

SOCIAL NEWS

POPULAR ON OUR WEBSITE

Football: Japan ease past Singapore 3-0 in World Cup qualifier

Christmas tree catches fire at Orchard Road; no injuries reported

POPULAR ON TWITTER

IDA, MDA to be restructured to capitalise on converging media and ICT landscape

Prosecution appeal against City Harvest sentences to proceed: AGC

POPULAR ON FACEBOOK

Health Ministry warns of phishing email scam

More will be done to recognise National Servicemen's efforts: MINDEF

JUMP TO Select Section

Navigate to:

NEWS

TV

GET OUR APPS

iPad/iPhone

Windows Mobile

Android

Blackberry

GET OUR NEWS

NEWS

Asia Pacific

World

Sport

Technology

Lifestyle

Photos

Archives

Singapore

Business

Entertainment

Health

Videos

Special Reports

TV

Live | News | Schedule |

Shows

SERVICES

Weather

ADVERTISE WITH US

Online | Mobile | TV |

Contact Sales

Mediacorp News Group © 2016

About Mediacorp Pte Ltd

Terms and Conditions

Privacy Policy

Back To Top